Peer Review: El cuento de hadas

Reviewer’s name:
Name of person whose composition you’re reviewing:

The purpose of peer reviewing is to give us writers a gauge by which to detect the reactions of others to our writing. An awareness of others’ reactions can help us to improve the content of our writing.

Step 1: First, scan the title and the first paragraph Then, (a) write down what you think the story is going to be about: ________________________________

The title and first paragraph should set the scene for the story. Based on what you’ve read so far, what are your expectations for the rest of the story in terms of its content, generally speaking? (b) write down your expectations and any questions you may have:

Step 2: Now read the story carefully. Does it contain the following elements:

Part 1: presentación y descripción del escenario................................................................. [ ]Sí [ ]No
Part 2: introducción de la trama (plot) y presentación de la complicación
................................................................................................................................. [ ]Sí [ ]No
Part 3: resolución................................................................................................................ [ ]Sí [ ]No
Part 4: desenlace ................................................................................................................ [ ]Sí [ ]No

Jot down details about any expectations you had that weren’t addressed:

Step 3: Identify areas of the text where you were a little confused or where you’d like to get more information (details, examples, explanations). Make notes in the right margin.

Step 4: Identify areas that you particularly liked. Identify these in the left margin.

Step 5: Make one suggestion for the writer about what s/he could do to make the text better.

Ali Miano•Stanford University
Adapted from a model by Trish Dvorak, University of Washington